

Dear Sir / Madam:

Safety is our first priority at Turbine Generator Maintenance, and every TGM employee is trained to put safety first. Our past records, however, do not reflect our commitment to safety, and we would like to show you what our past safety numbers include and what we have done to change our safety record at TGM. We are proud to say that our safety numbers are now well below industry standard.

We made drastic changes to how we train our employees and apply safety within our company. Our commitment to safety comes first from our Chief Executive Officer, David Branton, our Vice President of Operations, Sean Furey, and every employee from Technical Directors to Foremen, and Project Coordinators, is focused on safety.

Our own safety department is headed by an OSHA-trained Safety Director with thirty (30) plus years in the industrial and maintenance industry. Armed with the right tools and a focus on safety, our Safety Director frequents every major outage and most minor outages on-site to ensure that we are in compliance. No other company has gone to the lengths we have to secure our commitment to safety.

Though none of our safety incidents were drug related, one of the measures we have taken at TGM in our commitment to safety is to implement a zero tolerance drug policy. Since October 2008, TGM's policy is to conduct random, no-notice drug tests at various outages throughout the year.

Employees who fail are immediately terminated and released; personnel with a positive result are also banned from working for TGM in the future. In the past year, TGM personnel have been consistently randomly tested and consistently had negative test results. TGM is known throughout the industry as a drug-free service company and we are proud of that title.

We have been very successful in our safety program. Since January 2010, TGM has remained incident free. Our Safety Director is confident that, with his constant on-site audits and consistent involvement and training, TGM will eliminate all incidents, continuing not only improve, but raising the bar and setting the standard of safety for other companies to follow.

Please feel free to inquire about our safety program at any time.

Thank you.

TGM Management

125 SW 3rd Place, Suite 300
Cape Coral, Florida 33991
800.226.7557

www.turbinegenerator.com